Principal Pankley: Children are to follow the rules. In fact, the geometric investigation carried out here seeks in general to cast light on the question of which axioms, assumptions or auxiliary means are necessary in the proof of a given elementary geometrical truth, and it is left up to discretionary judgement [Ermessen] in each individual case which method of proof is to be preferred, depending on the standpoint adopted. Since its aim is to show the possibility or the impossibility of a proof, the axiomatic method is the highest expression of the search for the purity of methods.
